Arts II proposed

A student-initiated proposal for an Arts II program received strong support from student council Monday night.

The proposal, put forth by a group of Arts II students, calls for permission for 20 students to organize and participate in an Arts II program next year.

David Sharpe, one of the organizers, said Monday the number of students was chosen after some deliberation and appears to be the only figure feasible.

The proposal says if permission is granted to start the program, an Arts I professor has agreed to teach the course.

The suggestion emphasizes that the Arts II program will be aimed at fitting in with the rest of the university curriculum structure so that students would not be at a great disadvantage when leaving the program.

Sharpe said he will meet with dean of arts Dennis Healy Thursday to seek approval of the proposal.
